NEW RECORD IN SIGHT FOR SMITH AND C. W. HILL

Roar Over Final Stages of Flight from England to Australia

HILL IS EXPECTED FIRST

Four Days After
Hill

LONDON, Oct. 17.—(INS)—With the goal just beyond the horizon and a new record in sight for flight from England to Australia, Flight Lieutenant C. W. Hill and Wing Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith today roared over the final stages at top speed.

Lieut. Hill was a lap ahead of Commander Kingsford-Smith in actual distance and probably will be first to finish the thrilling impromptu race which developed between the two air-men, but to the pilot of the trans-Atlantic Southern Cross apparently will fall the new record for the flight. Both undoubtedly will break Bert Hinkler's record of 15½ days.

Lieut. Hill hopped off for Atambona, Timor, some two days ahead of Hinkler's record. His final dash will be from there across a stretch of sea to Port Darwin, Australia. Wing Commander Kingsford-Smith, advised said, meanwhile left Singapore for Sourabaya, Java, four days ahead of Hinkler's record. He left Croydon four days after Hill hopped off.

A later Central News dispatch from Singapore advised that Lieut. Hill landed for a brief pause at Bima before resuming flight to Atambona. Before leaving he announced he would attempt to negotiate the final lap of 500 miles over Timor Sea tonight.

COLORFUL FLOWERS BLOOM IN ABUNDANCE AMID BLANKET OF SNOW FAR UP SLOPES OF CANADIAN ROCKIES; BLOOMS UNWILTED IN THE COLD AIR

Caribou, A Nineteen-Pointer, is Bagged by Cyrus E. Smith,
One of Party of Three Pennsylvania Men Who Enjoyed Trip After Game

The fifth installment of Cyrus E. Smith's story of a trip participated in to Alberta, Canada, recently, follows:

By Cyrus E. Smith

Saturday, the 13th, was supposed to be the last day of our hunt, before striking the trail for the Dennison and Britain Ranch. I had secured all the heads to mount that I expected, except a caribou. So I asked Johnnie if he could take me where I could get caribou. So we saddled our mounts, and started out. It had snowed during the night and the ground was covered.

The higher up we went the deeper the snow became, and the steeper the slopes of rock-bound surface. Johnnie led up and up to the very sky-line peaks, and I wondered that even the mountain-bred horses could ever make the grade. Still I wondered why there was any reason to expect we would see any caribou on those barren, rocky tops, high above the timber line. Nothing but snow, ice and rocks could be seen, cold and bleak. As we neared the top of the divide I saw several lakes covered with ice a few hundred feet below the top-most peaks we were to pass over. Around these lakes was the only vegetation at that height.

Although there was snow all around, up through this carpet of snow grew hard grass and flowers of various kinds and colors. The blooms were not wilted by the keen cold frost, and the large deep blue violets, yellow and white daisies, and other flowers of white and purple, grew rigid and crisp through the snow. If some one had told me this I could hardly believe it. The only denizens of the wild we found at that height were two ptarmigans that were so bold and tame they scarcely moved out of our way.

When we started down the other side of the divide we could still see nothing but rocks and peak. After stumbling and slipping some more we came to the edge of the barren rocks, and looked down over a slope covered with a growth of shrubbery into a valley far below, a valley of beauty and grandeur, in the midst of which was a picturesque lake.

What Indian Johnnie didn't know about game, there was no use in my trying to tell him. He first pointed out two caribou up on the sky-line ridge of the mountain; then as they disappeared from view we passed down the slope toward the lake, and Johnnie pointed out four more feeding to our left. They kept their distance, and when we used the field glasses we saw there were no head among them that we desired. We soon saw five more working their way along between us and the lake, and we also passed them by. We saw one swimming the lake right in front of us, we being concealed from his view by a growth of firs. He came up to within 100 yards of us, and proved to be a year old bull. We then showed ourselves and he dashed away. As we traversed the lake shore we could see on the other side some three or four caribou, and as we followed around to the other side they seemed to get wise, and took the mountain climb with us after them, for one of the heads was a fair one, and another even better. As we followed up the steep sides to some distance we could see the best head with two smaller ones disappearing among the higher peaks, and Johnnie said: "No good, no catch up." So we then struck to our right and finally as we went up a rise and looked over a hummock, we could see the second best mount feeding down in a basin. Johnnie looked him over through the field glasses, and said "Good head."

So Johnnie then stepped back, and I made my way closer to the animal, keeping behind some rock, the closest I could get without getting out in the open. It was a long shot, about 500 yards. Well, I must have missed my first shot, as I sometimes do. But as he threw his head high and circled around to see just where the shot had come from, my second was left loose, and was good enough to stop all his fears. When I looked him over I soon found I had a nice 19 pointer. The head and feet were soon skinned out by the Indian, who also made a good cut out of the tenderloin, and one ham. The pieces were packed on Johnnie's saddle horse, and we started for camp.

This valley with the lake was a spot always to be remembered by anyone seeing it. This feeding and playground of the caribou proved to be a veritable paradise in the heart of the Rockies, just below timber line, and yet the

PARADE TO MARK ROAD'S COMPLETION

Upper Bucks Association Is Sponsoring Big Event
On October 28th

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

PERKASIE, Oct. 17.—Sponsored by the Upper Bucks Improvement Association, which for four years has been interested in getting improved highways in upper Bucks county, a big parade will be staged on Tuesday afternoon, October 28, and will be concluded with a free ox roast and an informal program at the Eagles' grove at Keller's Church.

This parade will mark the completion of 42 miles of improved highways in the upper section of Bucks county, the last having been completed when the final batch of concrete on the Quakertown-Doylestown road was poured on Sunday afternoon.

The date for this celebration was set at a committee meeting last evening, when the route of the parade was also outlined. The route will cover stretches on the improved highways.

According to the plan, the participants in the parade will assemble on the Ridge Road, west of Sellersville, at 2.30. From there it will proceed to Sellersville, Perkaspie, Dublin, Quakertown, Richlandtown, Springtown, Pleasant Valley to Durham. The parade will then proceed to Springtown and then go by way of the Harrow road to the Harrow and then by way of the Ridge Road to Keller's Church.

Following the ox roast an informal program will be presented in the Eagles' grove. Prominent residents of Bucks county will be invited and a large number of them will give short addresses. Among those to be invited will be Senator Clarence J. Buckman, to whom the association feels indebted for the road improvements, Assemblyman Albertson W. Haines and Wilson L. Yeakel, Judge Hiram H. Keller, Judge Calvin S. Boyer, the County Commissioners and others. Coffee and soft drinks will be provided by the L. G. E. In case of rain the program will be presented in the auditorium of Keller's Church.

WOMAN HURT WHEN CARS CRASH IN FOG

Accident Occurs at Intersection of Pond Street and
Wilson Avenue

RESULTS NOT SERIOUS

A woman had a narrow escape from serious injury this morning when two automobiles crashed head-on at Pond street and Wilson avenue.

The injured woman is Mrs. Anna M. Jensen, Staten Island, N. Y. Mrs. Jensen accompanied by her husband, Bernat Jensen, left Staten Island at five o'clock this morning to drive to Philadelphia where Mrs. Jensen was to go to a hospital for treatment.

There was a heavy fog and as the Jensen car reached the intersection of Pond and Wilson avenue a machine driven by Miss Ruth Dremer, 1857 E. Allegheny avenue, Philadelphia, crashed into it.

Miss Dremer is a teacher in the Harriman public school building.

Mrs. Jensen was cut about the chin and suffered abrasions of the ankle. A piece of broken glass from the windshield of the car in which she was riding broke the glass of her eye-glasses and narrowly escaped cutting her eye.

The Jensen car was considerably damaged and had to be towed from the scene.

Mrs. Jensen was treated at the Harriman Hospital and then continued on to Philadelphia.

Escapes From Hospital; Caught by The Police

Ernest Johnson, colored, Gordonsville, Virginia, who on Monday morning crawled to the P. R. R. signal tower at Cornwells Heights and asked to be given treatment for a series of bruises, escaped from the Harriman Hospital yesterday afternoon.

Johnson was found by the police on Radcliffe street. He was without shoes and had his head covered with his coat to conceal the bandages.

It is now thought that the wounds were inflicted on Johnson by some individual and that he did not fall from a freight train as he first stated.

Cars Must Be Tested Before November 1st

HARRISBURG, Oct. 17.—An enormous task has been imposed on 7,200 examining stations by the owners of 1,100,000 motor cars and trucks. Before November 1 these 7,200 examining stations must look over and approve 1,100,000 motor vehicles which now lack the "inspected" sticker. Only 11 working days remain in which to complete the task.

"Bright and early the morning of November 1 attaches of the State Highway Patrol will bring information against the owner of every un-inspected motor vehicle operating on Pennsylvania highways. We have the assurance of many municipal, borough and township officials that their police will join us. If the owner of an un-inspected car wishes to keep it out of service until December 1 he may do so, of course, but if he operates within that thirty-day period he subjects himself to a fine of $10 and costs," said Commissioner B. G. Eynon today.

Throughout the State motor patrolmen will be found on every main highway, stopping un-inspected cars and suggesting to their drivers that they obey the law. It is found that operators in the city of Philadelphia and in the most rural regions of Pennsylvania are most numerous among those whose cars lack the "O. K." sticker.

In hilly sections of Pennsylvania patrolmen are testing cars for brakes, stopping even those bearing the "O. K." sticker. The reason for this latter course is that many approved cars are deficient in brakes. It is not generally known, it seems, that a re-lined brake should be "taken up" after a week's service. Innumerable cars are found to have worthless emergency brakes.

"After an afternoon on Red Hill, west of Harrisburg on the William Penn Highway, I can well understand why so many accidents occur," said Capt. Wilson C. Price, of the Motor Patrol. "Slangily speaking, brakes seem to be what they have everything else but."

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Perkasie and Doylestown Arrange for Halloween Demonstrations

OTHER COUNTY NEWS

A full board of directors with every director active, was the slogan adopted at the annual meeting of the board of the Grand View Hospital, Sellersville, on Tuesday afternoon.

A nominating committee was appointed, and this group will recommend active and influential men in the North Penn Valley for directorships, upon the consideration of the present board. It is likely that several members of the board at the present time who are not active in the work will be replaced.

Plans are completed for the annual Halloween parade at Perkasie, sponsored by the Hartzell-Croutham Post, American Legion, of Perkasie. The parade will be held on Monday evening, October 27.

It is said by the officials in charge that the parade of 1930 will be larger than any in the preceding events which have been held annually in Perkasie for a number of years.

Large cash prizes are being offered, and clubs and organizations from all the towns in the North Penn Valley are to be represented in the line, having signified their intention to do so, to the officials.

So large has the parade become in recent years, that the committee is this year working out a new plan, whereby there will be a number of boards of judges to take care of the awarding of the prizes.

Previously there were so many divisions and so many entries in each division, that it required some time before the judges could arrive at the winners of all the prizes. The old plan was regarded as undesirable because it kept thousands of people waiting around the judges stand to hear the results and to receive the awards. It often required several hours before the prizes were finally in the hands of the winners.

This year each board of judges will have so small a group to select from that it will be able to make its decision while the line is on the march. The awards will then be made at the Arch street school campus, where the parade will terminate.

An amplifying system will be installed at the campus to facilitate the work of the announcer in broadcasting the high-lights of the parade.

Doylestown will have a community Halloween celebration and parade on Friday night, October 31. It was decided at a meeting held in the American Legion headquarters, attended by forty interested individuals representing various organizations.

The nature of the parade that will

JURY RETURNS VERDICT IN FALLSINGTON CRASH

Awards Total of $21,000 To
Two Women and Their Husbands

HAD SUED FOR $130,600

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 17.—Deliberating for nearly two hours, a jury in Mercer Circuit Court shortly before 6 o'clock last night returned a verdict awarding $21,000 to four of five plaintiffs who sought $130,600 as the result of an automobile crash near Fallsington on Christmas Eve, 1928. The panel's verdict was against the Trenton, Philadelphia & Chester Company, defendant in trial of the suit, over which Judge A. Dayton Oliphant presided.

A truck owned by the company and driven by one of their employees, Clifford Applegate, of the Pennington Road, figured in a crash with the sedan automobile in which the plaintiffs were traveling to New York City from Baltimore.

Mrs. Aletta Landau, of Jersey City, and Mrs. Esther J. Landau, of New York City, both of whom, it was brought out in testimony, were permanently injured as a result of the accident, were awarded damages of $10,000 each. Louis J. Landau, husband of Aletta, and his brother, Murray Landau, husband of Esther, were each awarded $500. A verdict of no case for action was returned against a fifth plaintiff, Samuel Novinson, who was driving the car in which the Landaus were riding. He sought $10,000 as the result of injuries sustained.

The truck driver admitted the charge of the plaintiffs that his vehicle was standing in the highway without lights, but claimed in his defense that he had taken the lights, which had gone out, into the cab of the machine and was lighting them when the sedan crashed into the truck. He further charged contributory negligence on the part of the sedan driver, averring that a cautious driver could have seen his truck standing on the highway, as it was still light.

Murray Landau testified on Wednesday that the accident had been responsible for his wife attempting to take her life on two occasions. Seven or eight doctors have been treating her since her release from McKinley Hospital, the witness testified.

Disappearance of Vincent Mather Baffles Solution — Only His Brother Knew He Could Drive Car and Doubts His Ability to Go Through Traffic—Family Sedan and Sum of Money is Taken by Lad Who Leaves Note for Parents

Langhorne, Pa., Oct. 17.—A popular 15-year-old boy, whose friends in this section are legion, is missing from his home here, and although members of his family scout the story that he has been kidnapped, still they can throw no light upon the reason for his disappearance.

The boy, who is being sought by State troopers, is Vincent Mather, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mather, of Maple avenue.

Vincent, who has been looked upon by residents of this borough as a "model" boy, was popular in church circles, the Langhorne high school which he attended, and with the populace in general.

Early yesterday morning Mr. and Mrs. Mather left for their places of employment; and Vincent's brother, Lester, left for school. Vincent, pleading that he felt somewhat ill, remained in bed.

When Lester returned to the residence yesterday afternoon he discovered that his brother had left the house, leaving a note in which he stated that a man named "Bartley" had robbed the house, and then at the point of a pistol had forced him (Vincent) to leave the place. Information given in the note was also to the effect that the man asked Vincent if he could drive an automobile, to which Vincent states he answered in the affirmative.

Elmer Bowers Celebrates His Twelfth Birthday

The twelfth birthday anniversary of Elmer Bowers son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Oliver Bowers, was celebrated at his West Bristol home on Wednesday evening, when a number of young friends paid a surprise visit, and helped to pass several joyous hours.

Those who were at the Bowers home when Elmer returned from an automobile ride were: Misses Florence Ingraham, Helen Nowack, Mazie Yeoman, Eliza Mitchener; Ruth Dalrymple, Ruth Wilkison; Messrs. Norman Carter, Edward Matlack, Edward Nowack, Samuel Dalrymple, Joseph Wilkison; Mr. and Mrs. George Lange, Mr. and Mrs. Bowers, of West Bristol; and little Betty Clark, of Philadelphia.

To Edward Matlack was the prize presented in the "Booby Game"; and the group of girls won over the boys in passing the ball. Helen Nowack was the successful contestant in the blowing of balloons.

A novel way of finding partners was by means of numbered slips of paper inside of peanut shells, the girls' shells being tied with orange ribbon, and the boys' with black.

The dining-room of the Bowers home was attractive in its decorations of orange and black crepe paper; while in the center of the table was a pretty basket of large dahlia, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Mertz. The chocolate-iced cake was topped with 12 orange candles. Favors were paper hats, and balloons.

Elmer was the recipient of a number of very useful gifts.

VISITS IN UPPER DARBY

Miss Anna B. Foster, of Mill street, spent the week-end in Stonehurst, Upper Darby, where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. P. Foster Minister.

Today in History:

General Burgoyne surrendered at Saratoga—1777.

The other members of the Mather family state they do not believe the youth has been kidnapped. The family car, a sedan, is missing from the garage. None of the family, with the exception of Lester, had any knowledge that the boy could operate an automobile. When speaking of this phase of the problem today, Lester said he doubted if his brother could drive a car well enough to handle it in traffic.

The sum of $40 was taken from the room of Lester Mather. Vincent also wrote in the brief note that the stranger had assured him he would be able to return to his home within a few days.

The missing youth is president of the sophomore class at the Langhorne high school; is a member of the Langhorne Presbyterian Church and Sunday School; and acts as treasurer of the Christian Endeavor connected with the Presbyterian Church. He is also a member of the high school orchestra.

Other members of the Mather family are certain that studies did not bother the youngster as his averages were always very good, and he did not neglect either school classes or preparation of his lessons, apparently.

Vincent, according to the family, had not expressed dissatisfaction over any matter, and always seemed to be in a happy frame of mind. When the kidnapping theory is mentioned all of the Mather family members express doubt, but state the entire affair does not sound like Vincent.

A description of the missing boy has been broadcast throughout Pennsylvania, and state troopers are engaged in the search.

There are no relatives, at a distance whom the boy can visit; and according to other members of the family his friends are all in this vicinity and he had little or no knowledge of other sections of the country.

Rather than believe the story given in the note, written by Vincent, reporting that the house had been ransacked for money, and that Vincent had been forced to write the note at the point of a pistol, and take the family car in order that "Bartley" and he might get away, it is thought the whole affair is an escapade of a 15-year-old boy, but one looked upon as most unusual by those who were familiar with the lad.

TIME AND CUSTOM

The Japanese considers it courteous to make a loud, pleased noise when sipping soup; the well-bred Englishman piles peas with his knife upon his fork then eats from the back of the fork; the American is unique in considering it well bred to tip his soup plate away from him, to call a man a cow in France is as insulting as to suggest canine ancestry in America. Time was, and not so long ago, when a woman was indecent who showed an ankle; the quarter sleeve masculine bathing suits of 15 years ago seems merely cumbersome today.

Such are the vagaries of taste and judgment and custom. What seems moral or modest to one race may be most immoral or immodest in another country. And that works both ways between the civilized and the savage.

Morals being geographical probably accounts for the fact that a book banned as obscene in Boston is in good standing elsewhere in the United States. What other explanation could there be for a state of affairs wherein the Harvard College faculty prescribes for student reading a great American novel which book censors in Boston say cannot be sold?

That is obscene which shocks; that shocks which is unfamiliar. There can be no absolute standards of obscenity or profanity; they are relative to the mind of the listener. Hence it is inevitable that judgments should differ in different cities and from one year to another.

EUROPE TRIES IT

Before the United States began the severe restriction of immigration the same relationship existed between prosperity and the number of immigrants welcomed and bad times and the number of departing immigrants that is now to be found in the European countries talking of immigration restriction.

This is only natural, but it has often been overlooked in discussions of the immigration problem by Europeans. At the same time they have failed correctly to estimate the net effect of immigration restriction upon the people affected.

In their resentment at not being permitted to enter the United States foreigners have charged this country with deliberately seeking to pauperize the European working classes. Aside from the palpable absurdity of such charges, they overlook the fact that South America, and to a lesser extent Canada and Australia, welcome immigrants.

So accustomed had the people of Europe become to the opportunity to emigrate that they looked upon it as an inalienable right when the countries on the receiving end began cutting down on them for economic and social reasons. It will take years to reconcile them to the lowered gates in the land of opportunity, but a little toying with the problem by Europeans at home will expedite the process. They will be more charitable toward Uncle Sam now that they know what it is to have more alien residents than you can find employment for.

Just when it seemed the decorated mug was to be lost to the barber shop forever, the ladies rushed in to save the day.

W.N.U. SERVICE

"What I said," and Sir George forgot his customary respectful attitude and unconsciously assumed a dogmatic tone. "Nothing can or will be done unless both of the women in this house are kept absolutely ignorant of what is going on, and especially your daughter."

MacBeth lay back on his pillows and surveyed the determined young face. The young fellow thinks Roberta will get excited about him, he thought.

Aloud he said, "Roberta's not the girl to get excited about your dangers." "Perhaps not," said his secretary, grimly, "but she's not to know for more reasons than one. Not," he added, as he saw MacBeth's expression, "that the girl herself may not be perfectly loyal and trustworthy, but," and he said it with due emphasis, "I am not trusting some of her quaint companions."

MacBeth found he could get nothing more from him then and finally gave it up.

"Mind, I don't agree with you about Roberta," he said emphatically. "She's high-strung and determined, but she's my girl and I know I can trust her."

"That may be, but after all she is young, and she picks her friends rather carelessly to my way of thinking. Is it on, with Roberta in the dark completely? Or is it off, and you tell the girl the whole scheme?"

MacBeth thought awhile, and then held out his hand. "It's a good business-like, workable scheme, so we'll say it's on and all females barred."

"Done!" said Sir George. "Ray Brown will meet me half way, and I'll get the money up there or be found in the canal."

CHAPTER IX

The sun shone brightly on the tow-path as Sir George crossed the bridge on his way to the bank. He had the small car Roberta usually drove. She had refused, emphatically, Sir George's invitation to join him, saying:

"No thanks. I've more interesting things to do than drive to that rotten old village this beautiful morning, with nothing more exciting at the end than the bank and post office."

He looked at her tranquilly. He knew that behind the brusque refusal lurked a determination not to accompany him anywhere, ever. Evidently whatever tale Roberta had been told down by the landing had been black. "I find your village and post office quite interesting. Anything I can bring you, Aggy?"

She shook her head. "Be careful of yourself, laddie. Mind thou awful turning at the bridge and don't be reckless."

Roberta laughed. Sir George regarded her gravely. "What's the joke?" He was always careful of Lady Sandison's dignity and feelings.

Roberta realized this and, despite her prejudice, liked it. She turned quickly to her aunt now: "I wasn't laughing at you, Aunt Aggy, but merely at the thought of any chance to be reckless in this place. What danger could lurk between this island and the post office?"

"You would be surprised," Sir George said levelly, with a glance at his stepmother, "how full of adventure a countryside can be. I shall be home late today," he observed casually as he rose. "I have several matters to look after for Mr. MacBeth. I may even be too late for dinner, Aggy."

Aggy looked at him as he went toward the door and her expression was such as to cause her stepson to wonder if Robert MacBeth had not, after all, confided something to his shrewd little sister.

"Keep yourself out of mischief if it's a possible thing, laddie," was all that she said, however. As for Roberta, she allowed a slender eyebrow to raise itself ever so slightly.

He was irked by that eyebrow, however, as he went down the steps to the car. Everything that he was about to do seemed somehow silly and melodramatic, in view of that lifted eyebrow. What a danger signal the girl was anyway. There was no keeping her out of mischief.

Sir George went down the river road toward the bank, going over and over in his mind his carefully laid plans, which, despite his sober thoughtfulness, still seemed somehow theatrical and a bit unreal in this setting. How Roger would laugh if he ever knew.

He parked his car near the bank. It was early and there were few cars about. After a careful look about him, Sir George went into the bank. He had seen nothing unusual when he entered. Two cars only were parked in front of the bank. When he went inside, business was going on as usual. He went directly to the bank manager's room. It was divided off from the front and the rest of the bank offices by a partition of wood and glass. The upper part of this partition did not reach all the way up to the old-fashioned ceiling. It was only about eight feet high.

The bank manager was ready for Sir George when he entered. The payroll money was on the desk, although the ordinary observer would not have known it, as it was in a flat oilskin package. Sir George roughly counted over the money, and then proceeded to put it in a safety belt about his waist, securing the package by safety pins. The putting of the money in the belt was accomplished, without fear of observation, by the simple expedient of going behind the desk and pulling open the door of an old-fashioned cupboard so that it formed a screen between him, the windows, and the door to the private office. At the other side of this screen was a heavy steel filing case. Sir George finished stowing the money away and was just about to step out of his retreat, when he heard a curious sound from the manager and immediately afterward the words: "Hands up!"

He could scarcely believe, at first, that he had heard the long-dreaded words. He thought his imagination had tricked him. Screened as he was, he stood motionless and peered out of the crack of the door. He saw the manager deadly pale, his hands in the air. Slowly approaching him was a man with a pistol in one hand.

There was a most uncommon and a deadly silence in the main office.

Instantly and noiselessly Sir George lowered himself. He had remembered he was six feet-three. He gradually let himself down on the floor, still hidden by the desk. He slowly stretched himself out. The paralyzed bank manager was standing motionless while the intruder gathered in what small amount of money lay upon the desk. Sir George crawled noiselessly and slowly behind the desk. He joined for once in his height, he stretched out a long arm and caught the thief, whose back was turned to him, by his ankles.

He came down with a crash. His head struck the desk and his pistol fell from his hand and went bounding along the floor toward the closet. The man lay stunned and still. Sir George, as the bank manager turned put his finger to his lips and indicated that he was to sit on the fallen bandit and tie him up.

Still keeping himself below the glass of the partition and away from the doorway, Sir George picked up the pistol and crawled on the desk nearest the main office. Again thanking his stars for his height he stood erect and peered over the partition.

Paralyzed by the sudden appearance of three men without warning, the clerks had been backed up against the wall by one robber, while the second thief, who also had a pistol, was rapidly sweeping the money, stacked near the teller's window, into his pocket.

This man turned swiftly as though he had eyes in the back of his head. As he turned he fired. The shot struck the partition a very little to one side, as Sir George ducked and fired. His bullet hit the man's pistol hand and as the pistol dropped and the man reached for it, Sir George winged him again, this time in the leg. The third man near the door swung his pistol away from the clerks and clients he was holding at bay, but Sir George fired first. The fellow yelled and dashed outside to a waiting machine. Sir George jumped down from the desk, ran through the doorway into the main bank and hurried toward the doorway. But the men in the car had started, and as he emerged, one of them fired. The bullet went through Sir George's coat sleeve.

The car started across the bridge, racing dangerously, despite the shouts of the few people on the street. From the back of the car came a succession of shots that discouraged pursuit.

divide at that point was not so much higher up. As we passed up on the other side Johnnie looked back, farther down the valley, and said "Caribou across lake, one big one, some small ones." What eyes that Indian must have! The animals were a mile or more away, and he had spotted them with the naked eye. Even after we had gone back I could not see them when they were pointed out to me, not until we had made three-quarters of the distance to them. There were probably six of them, some does, some bulls, and one among them bigger than any of us had yet secured. But I had already all the law permitted. So we journeyed on up the mountainside to where we left our horses. If the law had allowed I could have easily bagged six to eight bull caribou that day, all good mounts, for I had many chances for good shots. After I had secured my head we must have seen 30 to 40 caribou, and I would have given much to have had my movie camera along, as there were many chances for good pictures. It was getting late, and we needed to hurry to get over the hazardous trail, and we just made the camp a little after dark. This was our last day's hunt, and one I shall never forget, for it seemed to me in that one day I saw everything in the nature of scenic changes, snow, ice, bleak wind-whipped spots, barren slippery rocks, and ice-covered lakes nearly as high up as the top of the divide.

take place at 7.30 the night of the occasion, or on Saturday night, November 1, in case of rain, will be announced in detail next Thursday after a canvass has been made of the town for funds to finance the parade.

It was the general opinion last night that Doylestown should not fall behind other towns and drop the community parade this year and that the response for funds, which last year amounted to about $350, will be just as generous this year.

It is quite possible that the prizes offered this year will not be as large as last year, but the competition will be just as keen. An effort will be made to interest not only Doylestown people but residents of nearby communities to take part. The parade this year will be of special interest to kiddies. There will be more prizes than ever for the young folks, according to the present plans.

Councilman Bartram Moore again consented to head the general Halloween committee. William Plank was placed in charge of the music committee and Theodore Thierolf was authorized to purchase the red lights.

The members of Boy Scout Troop No. 4, of Doylestown, represented at the meeting by Assistant Junior Scoutmaster Charles Reimer, offered the services of the Scouts in assisting to direct traffic on the night of the parade.

Councilman Moore read letters from the National Farm School Band, the Doylestown Band and the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, offering their services without charge for the parade.

The list of prizes to be offered will be announced next week.

The note read: "Dear Mother:—Do not worry, I will be back in two or three days. Some man who gave his name as Bartley came to the door and asked me if I could drive an automobile. I told him I could and he pulled a gun on me and ordered me to get into the machine and 'drive me where I tell you.' He told me to write this note to you and tell you not to worry, that I would be back in a couple of days, so don't tell anyone. Love, Vincent."

yelled once, and he threatened to shoot me if I called out again."

When he left home the boy had no clothing beside what he was wearing. He is described as being tall and thin, large for his age.

The boy's father is manager of a chain store here, and he is nephew of Burgess George C. Mather.

Reasons also advanced by some of the authorities for disbelief of the kidnapping part of the story, are that it would be hardly possible that one engaged in criminal practices could not drive an automobile; and it is doubtful if a robbery and kidnapping occurred that the individual engineering same would take time to dictate a note to the victim of the kidnapping.

HARD TO FORECAST WINNERS TOMORROW

By Copeland C. Burg
I. N. S. Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The magician who could reach into his coattails and spring out a pink rabbit with both hands tied around his neck would not be one whit more clever than the pop-eyed football fan who correctly forecasts the winners in tomorrow's eastern clashes. Perhaps not in recent years have there been so many good teams pitted against eleven just a little bit worse or a little bit better.

The national champions, Notre Dame, and Carnegie Tech, take the spotlight with their intersectional battle at South Bend. Carnegie pins its faith in two hopes—first, that Notre Dame's less experienced forward wall will not stand the gaff of Tech's roaring backfield and secondly that the entire Rockne outfit has been burned out and weakened in stamina by their jousts against Southern Methodist and Navy on successive Saturdays.

The latter hope is rather weak-kneed. Coach Knute Rockne used so many players against Navy that none of his regulars was taxed and there isn't any reason to believe that he is not going to face the Tech outfit with the flower of his horde of players. The swing goes to Rockne further in that he has built a special defense and attack for Tech. His offensive is to be an open field game, almost certain to be highlighted by baffling plays that have a fair chance of catching the ponderous tartan team off guard.

Major Ralph Sasse, the new coach at West Point, is moving onto Cambridge to engage Harvard in a guessing contest. Neither team has been given a real test and just what either is capable of is as mysterious as a New York murder. One thing, so they say, is certain Harvard has a better field general than the Cadets. He is Barry Wood and if he is half as good as they rave, Major Sasse's boys are going to have a troubled afternoon.

Brown, conqueror of Princeton, is invading the hosts of Yale with an outstanding machine. Guril is a real quarterback and Link Fogarty, Andy Rotelli and Eddie Gilmartin match the stars of the Blue. Brown's sole handicap is lack of weight and except for this should be a wide choice over Yale.

The answer to the Cornell-Princeton problem may be taken from gloomy Gil Dobie's pre-game statement. For the first time in years the veteran mentor has come out dripping optimism. He says Cornell has "a fair squad." Translated that means they have a great scoring machine with a superb back field and line. Princeton always plays a more pugnacious game late in the season and it doesn't look likely that Coach Bill Roper in a week's time has been able to improve the Tigers enough to turn back the Red outfit.

Pennsylvania goes west to tackle Wisconsin with one of the strongest eastern teams. Coach Wray, making his debut with the Red and Blue, has built a speedy group around Captain Dick Gentile, Masters and Green in the backfield and Riblett and Olson in the line.

Missouri, twice defeated, is bringing a team to New York that should yield to Chick Meehan's New York University squad without much ado. Lou Little, Columbia coach, is justly worried about his affair with Dartmouth at Hanover and Vic Hanson, coach of a promising Syracuse team is in the same mood about the Syracuse-Pitt engagement.

Colgate treks west with a superb eleven to test Michigan State.

Parade to Mark Road's Completion

The cost of improvement to the roads during the past four years has amounted to about $1,500,000. The one costing the most was the stretch leading from Quakertown to Kulp's Corner, which cost about $375,000. This is about 7 miles in length.

Ridge Road has been improved for about 15 miles. The improved area from Springtown to Durham covers about 8 miles and the improvements on the roads from the Perkaskie borough line to the Ridge Road and the Grand View Hospital road covers about two miles and the road from the Harrow to Bethlehem also covers a great mileage, eight of which are located in Bucks county.

The improvement of these roads was brought about largely through the co-operation of the Upper Bucks Improvement Association, civic organizations, service clubs and Granges. Some of these organizations included the chambers of commerce of Dublin, Perkaskie, Quakertown and Sellersville, the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs of Perkaskie, Sellersville and Quakertown, and several Granges in the upper end of the county.

Members of the Upper Bucks Improvement feel this parade and program will be a fitting manner in which to express to those responsible for the improvements the appreciation of the communities throughout the upper part of Bucks county. It is expected that at least 500 cars will be in line. The Perkaskie Boys' Band will furnish music at the Eagles' grove at Keller's Church.

The contractor announced that the new road from Quakertown to Kulp's Corner will be ready for traffic by Sunday, October 26. The last batch of concrete for this stretch was poured about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Employees on this stretch held an informal celebration as the last batch was being poured. About 200 of them, in addition to a large number of visitors, witnessed the pouring of the last of the concrete and just before it was placed in the road bed the employees dropped coins into the mixture thus bringing to a close one of the greatest road improvements in upper Bucks county.

The time of the hearing was postponed; and it held this evening, will take place in the office of W. Carlisle Hobensack, justice of the peace.

They Overlooked the Diamonds

THERE is a modern flippancy to the effect that "What you don't know won't hurt you." It is also a fallacy. For instance:

The farmers of Kimberley were a disgusted, disheartened lot. They said the soil was too rocky to earn them a living. Some of them left. Others died in poverty.

And all the time their children were playing with diamonds.

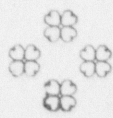

But the farmers didn't know. They thought the priceless gems were pebbles.

Don't be like those Kimberley farmers. Know!

Don't seek opportunity in some distant place and overlook the diamonds that are daily within your grasp. Know!

Advertising is a mine of opportunity. It tells of values you wouldn't know about if it were not there to guide you.

The secret of economical buying is information. The man or woman who is best informed is the one who buys to best advantage.
